Iran leaders leaning left

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Iran's revolutionary government turned Tuesday to liberal, Western-oriented politics to bring order to their country and the way for Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's republic. But lynchings were reported in the cities and mysterious gunmen fired on the offices of the new prime minister.

Reliable sources reported that unknown assailants fired on Bazaragan's offices early Tuesday. At the time Bazaragan was meeting in the offices of Karim Sanjaby, his newly appointed foreign minister. The sources said no one was injured and the men were rushed back to Khomeini headquarters.

Sanjaby, 74, served as the leader of the National Front, a coalition of several liberal parties that opposed the shah.

The National Front's official spokesman, Dariush Forouhar, was elected as labor minister.

Western diplomats said the selection of leading National Front figures indicated that Bazaragan, a human rights activist and former Front member, was trying to broaden support beyond the religious community that had been at the forefront of the anti-shah struggle.

Front leaders have generally espoused what could be considered moderately leftist views, but the new government is certain to avoid military ties with either major world power.

The newspaper Ettelaat reported six people had been hanged in the northwest city of Tabriz on the orders of religious leaders. The newspaper also said insurgents ripped the emblem off the U.S. Consulate in Tabriz.

The reports could not be confirmed here but, if true, it may signal that the new government still lacks total control. It has repeatedly called on jubilant Iranians not to resort to "cruelty" in the wake of victory.

There were no new reports of violence or arrests involving Americans in Iran. A contingent of 69 U.S. Marines was reported standing by in the Azores Islands in the Atlantic in case Marines guarding the U.S. Embassy needed reinforcement. Six helicopters that could be used to evacuate threatened Americans were standing by in Italy.

Khomeini made his first nationwide television address Tuesday evening and repeated appeals for the return of weapons stolen from military bases during the weekend street violence that marked the collapse of the shah-appointed government of Shahpour Bakhtiar on Sunday.

Bakhtiar was arrested Tuesday by armed guerrillas. He was taken blindfolded to Khomeini's headquarters and was reported to have been under protection of Khomeini's prime minister, Mehdi Bazargan, after raiders ransacked his home on the outskirts of Tehran.

Khomeini aides said they did not know what charges Bakhtiar would face. "He is a prisoner of the government," one said. "I assume he will be tried to find out whether or not he is guilty."

In his nationwide address Tuesday, Khomeini said: "I congratulate the nation on the success of the revolution. We will all have to work together under the banner of Islam to build the country."

He forbade attacks on military or police installations and promised that all religious minorities will be able to "live in peace and prosperity in the new era in Iran."

Sheep deaths linked to fallout

By WENDY OGATA
Universe Staff Writer

Documents released Tuesday by state officials contain "some very interesting information with respect to effect of radiation fallout," Gov. M. Matheson said at a news conference.

The documents revealed that radiation fallout from 1953 nuclear testing in Nevada — 1,000 times the maximum allowable amount of radiation — resulted in the death of 4,000 sheep.

The Atomic Energy Commission

(AEC) "willfully refused" to study possible effects the radiation had on humans in the same area as the sheep, Michael Zimmerman, a member of the governor's radiation committee, said at the news conference.

Zimmerman said several thousand sheep which were being herded in southwestern Utah in April and May of 1953 developed lesions and suffered spontaneous abortions.

"If that happened to sheep out here, what about the people that lived in Cedar City who got a higher dose?" Zimmerman asked. Cedar City is about 100 miles east of the Nevada test site.

Zimmerman said the state veterinarian was called in to investigate the sheep deaths and "immediately radiation was suspected." At first, Zimmerman said, the military admitted radiation testing did contribute to the sheep deaths.

However, a study conducted by the AEC was reported to show that the sheep deaths were not related to the nuclear testing. In November of 1953, the AEC stated they believed the sheep deaths were not related to the nuclear testing. Instead, they said they were caused by malnutrition.

Zimmerman pointed to a stack of documents and said that some of the documents indicate radiation was a contributing factor in the sheep deaths.

Close to 400 documents were given to the radiation committee by the Utah State Archives late last December. In compliance with the Utah Information Practices Act, the names of sheep ranchers involved in the incident were deleted.

A few of the documents were stamped "Restricted" and "For Official Use Only," but Zimmerman said he checked with the government agencies involved and is firmly convinced that they are not official classification stamps.

The documents indicate that between March 17 and June 4, 1953, the AEC conducted 11 nuclear tests at the Nevada test site.

Matheson said the documents contain "some very damning information with respect to the effect of radiation fallout on sheep, and the sheep happen to be in the same area where, at that time, were numbers of people. And we have to assume that the exposure on one was also an exposure on the other."

Referring to the refusal by the AEC to study the radiation effects on humans in the area, Matheson said, "This kind of information doesn't make us very proud of the federal government — the AEC in the 1950's."

The governor said the federal government this year will bear the brunt of the burden of a multi-million dollar health study to determine if the high cancer death rate in southern Utah and radiation from the nuclear tests are connected.

According to a copyrighted story in the Deseret News Tuesday, a University of Utah study concludes that nuclear testing in the 1950s caused increased leukemia deaths in Utah.

The story says a year-long study by Dr. Joseph L. Lyon, co-director of the Utah Cancer Registry, shows children born in the fallout area during the most concentrated period of nuclear weapons testing had a leukemia death rate nearly two and one half times that of children born before and after the Nevada tests.

Schlesinger testifies

Oil cutoff serious

WASHINGTON (AP) — Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger told Congress Tuesday there is "a high probability" against quick restoration of oil production under the new agreement of the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

Schlesinger testified that if the oil remains through June, it could be about worldwide oil shortages as was the 1973-74 Arab oil embargo.

In fact, Khomeini may be powerless to open the valves that had supplied 40 percent of the free world's oil, even if he wanted to, Schlesinger told the House energy and power subcommittee.

It is plain that control of the oil belongs to certain radical elements and political elements not to Khomeini, he said.

There is no assurance they will respond to urgings from Tehran and if they do, no indication they will do so quickly, Schlesinger said. The Carter administration Cabinet officer said the issue remains "iffy" because Khomeini's government hasn't yet stated its intentions on whether to open oil exports.

While stressing the seriousness of the situation, Schlesinger echoed President Carter's assertion Monday that the predicament had not yet become critical.

And he said that voluntary measures — as opposed to gasoline rationing or banning Sunday sales of gasoline — should be capable of offsetting the loss to the United States from the Iranian oil cutoff.

To the steps outlined by Carter — heeding the 55 mph speed limit, turning thermostats down to 65 degrees and avoiding unnecessary driving — Schlesinger listed other measures the administration is promoting.

These include shifts away from oil to coal and natural gas by industries able to make such conversions and diversion of large quantities of natural gas from producing states into the interstate market to accommodate such fuel shifts.

Schlesinger also said the administration is considering temporarily employing environmental requirements that limit burning of coal and slowing down the timetable under which refineries must shift completely from regular to "unleaded" gasoline.

Inflation strikes again as gas prices increase

Inflation took another bite out of car owners' pocketbooks this past week as the price of gas in the area raised an average of four cents a gallon.

Local service stations reported the price increase began last week.

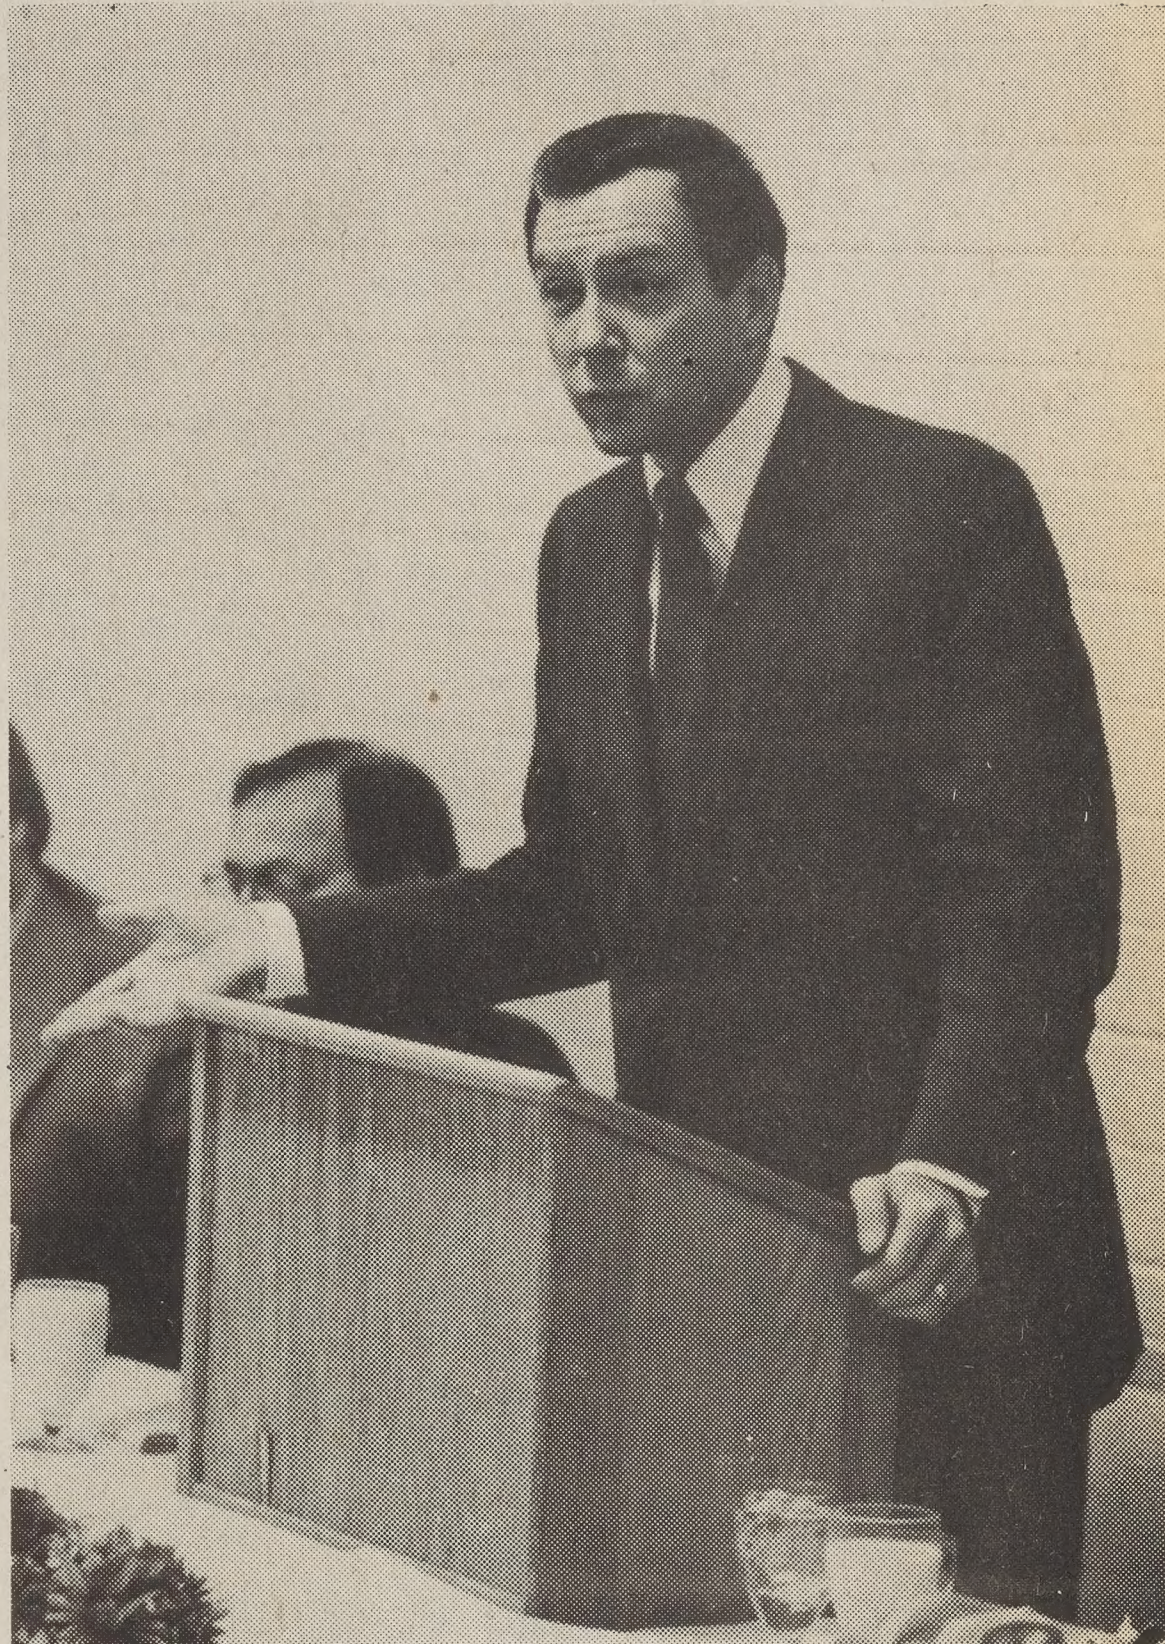

In an informal survey of Provo and Orem service stations, The Daily Universe learned that the average price per gallon of gas was 69 cents for self-service regular and 78 cents for full-service premium.

However, gas was found priced as low as 66 cents for a gallon of self-service regular and 75 cents for full-service premium.

The reason for the recent price hike is unclear. Several service station managers said an increase in refinery costs is the reason, while others said they raised their prices "to keep up with the competition."

According to Eric Bjarnson, assistant manager of the Edgemont Chevron Station, 3220 N. Canyon Rd., Provo, "The current price level will probably remain the same for at least a month or two."

ORRIN HATCH . . . "BYU students will have the training necessary to catch up and go ahead in life."

Hatch opposes SALT agreement

Editor's note: During the current congressional Lincoln's Day recess, Utah Senators Jake Garn and Orrin Hatch have scheduled meetings and speeches with their constituents in Utah. During the recess both will visit BYU. Universe Staff Writer John Jesse will report on their visits. This is his first report.

By JOHN JESSE
Universe Staff Writer

The Soviet Union will be capable of obliterating our country by 1984, Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, told student Republicans at a breakfast Tuesday.

The senator said the Russians have increased their armaments a great deal in the last few years. "When I came to the Senate three years ago everyone was saying that we had overwhelming military power," Hatch said. "They are not saying that anymore."

Hatch said he does not agree with the administration's support of the SALT agreements. "I've supported the administration on a number of programs when they were right," he said, "but they are not right on the SALT treaties and I think it's going to be a tough debate in the Senate."

"I think they will have a very difficult time getting the 67 votes needed for SALT," Hatch said. "It will be a long hard battle. We need to get people in government who are willing to stand up to the Russians."

The Senator commended Carter for his efforts to balance the budget and decrease the federal deficit. He said he will support the President if he fulfills his promise to increase the NATO budget by 3 percent.

Hatch described himself as a progressive conservative, "one who doesn't say no to everything but attempts to improve things through a conservative approach."

According to Hatch, a presidential campaign is not in his future. "I don't have any presidential ambitions," he said. "I will be supporting Ronald Reagan, who I believe will get the nomination in 1980."

Hatch said he has made some mistakes in his efforts. "There are things I have voted for and later I wished that I wouldn't have voted that way," he said.

Utah's junior senator cited RARE II as the single most important issue affecting Utah he will work on during the current congressional session. "Wilderness advocates passed the RARE II proposal to add 1,600 acres to wilderness," he said. "If RARE II is not intelligently handled, the American public will wind up being deprived of active usage of their lands."

Seated with several local political dignitaries, including previous congressional candidate Jed Richardson, Hatch said Richardson "would have better reflected Utah's point of view" than Representative Gunn McKay, D-Utah. McKay defeated Richardson in November's elections.

Hatch said he believes the Utah congressional delegation works well together. "Jake and I have lunch together at least once a week and we are always working together for the betterment of Utah," he said.

Hatch, a BYU graduate, praised the school for its ability to train students in meeting the future. "I know of none better," he said. "You will learn more academics at other schools but BYU students will have the training necessary to catch up and go ahead in life."

Report made on takeover bid

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A three-member committee appointed by the City Commission reported Tuesday that two commissioners and the police chief tried a secret takeover of the city's Personnel Department.

The committee's report also said the three tried to buy off labor unions so they would not take sides in last fall's voter-defeated plan to unify city and county government.

Gas explosion destroys home

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A gas company employee was warning a family of loose gas when the house exploded, injuring four family members, knocking the employee over and destroying the $50,000 structure.

Gas was also cut off to 12 nearby houses, resulting in evacuation of five families.

Members of the Russell Ferre family suffered burns on their hands and faces when gas from a broken main exploded and engulfed their home in flames. The main had been damaged when a mailbox was replaced.

A bill which would have raised the retirement pay for top state executives was defeated Tuesday in the Utah State House.

Provisions in the bill would have made the state attorney general, the secretary of state, the state auditor and the state treasurer eligible for retirement pay of up to $700 per month, depending on the number of terms served. The bill was defeated by a 18-48 vote.

The Senate defeated a bill which would have given the state's five top executives an approximately 7 percent pay hike. The bill was killed by a 13-15 vote.

In other action, a bill to permit release of personal adoption information passed the House.

Peace talks affected by PLO

JERUSALEM (AP) — Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan said Tuesday that Israel cannot deny the "position" or "value" of the Palestine Liberation Organization in future peace talks.

His comment, viewed by some as a softening of Israel's position on the PLO, drew a mild rebuke from Prime Minister Menachem Begin at a meeting of Begin's Likud party.

Dayan, who is to represent Israel in peace talks later this month, said the PLO "is not a state, but we cannot deny their position or their value in the conflict."

Segregation still found in U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly half the minority children in America go to segregated schools, and Congress, the administration and the courts all seem to have lost interest in doing much about it, the U.S. Civil Rights Commission said Tuesday.

In 1954, the Supreme Court ruled segregation unlawful and harmful to youngsters, but a child born that year could now be in graduate school without ever having attended an integrated school, educator Stephen Horn, vice chairman of the panel, told a news conference.

Job pinch blamed on Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Labor Department, which has money to create more than a quarter of a million public jobs this year, says the jobs are not being filled because of problems in meeting tougher government rules.

The number of people holding jobs under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act plummeted by more than 200,000 last summer amid threatened program cutbacks by Congress. Now that Congress has extended the program for another four years, the Labor Department says it is encountering problems building the program up again.

The department is casting blame for the problems on Congress, citing delays in approval of new financing for the $10-billion CETA programs and tighter eligibility requirements ordered by Congress in an attempt to reduce fraud and other abuses that have plagued them.

Winter storms still lash U.S.

(AP) — A storm packing winds up to 100 mph lashed the Pacific Northwest on Tuesday, washing away a $24.6 million pontoon bridge, leaving tens of thousands without power and killing at least one person.

In the frozen cities of the Northeast, plumbers and policemen were kept busy patching busted water pipes and trying to unscramble a log jam of abandoned automobiles, the legacy of record sub-zero temperatures and heavy snows.

"It's a bummer," said one weary officer who had about 200 cars towed away in a suburb of Washington. "People just walk away and leave them."

Ross Anderson, co-owner of the Star Palace discotheque, guaranteed the Provo City Commission Tuesday that a contract would be signed by tonight for the installation of a sprinkler system in the disco.

"If it kills me, I'll have one signed tomorrow," he said. "What I want is your blessing on continuing operation, with the understanding we will be done by March 1."

to overcome its closing."

City Commissioner J. Earl Wignall told Anderson, "We like your business, but I would rather see you go broke than lose a life."

"Your firm said it would be done within 90 days. Brent (Weeks) admitted in our earlier meetings that he hadn't ordered it. In your interview with the Idaho Falls paper you said it had been ordered. Who's right?" Wignall asked.

"It was my understanding that it had been ordered," Anderson said.

Anderson stated that his reason for not having it installed earlier was, "Frankly, I didn't think it was that big of a deal. My understanding was that we had six months to do it in. If I had known it was three months, I would have come down to work on it."

Anderson, who lives in Idaho Falls, said he has to "depend on the people here for my information."

"Our business is publicly oriented," he said. "It would take a lot son said, "I haven't been in day-to-day contact with the people here."

A hearing is scheduled for Friday in the Fourth District Court on the temporary restraining order which allows the disco to remain open. The order was obtained by Brent Weeks, part owner, last Friday. "It is out of our hands now," Provo Mayor James E. Ferguson said. "It is the court's decision now." The mayor told Anderson that if he could present a copy of the signed contract, the city would be willing to give their input and approval at the court hearing. He also told him a performance bond would be required to show the disco's intention to stall the sprinkler system and correct other building deficiencies.

Committee votes to accept grant

By DEANA LLOYD
Universe Staff Writer

The Select Committee on the Community Development Block Grant voted against a suggestion Tuesday night to return a $1 million grant to the federal government.

The grant has been set aside for Provo if the city wants it. The select committee has been organized to evaluate suggestions on how to use the money. The suggestions will then be submitted to the city commission, who will apply for the grant.

On a motion from Dennis Weir, committee member and West Area Council representative, the committee voted to accept the fund. The only dissenting vote came from committee chairman C. Bruce Jensen, who sent out a letter last week expressing his view that the money should be returned to the federal government.

"It is time we face this issue," said Weir. "If it is the recommendation of the committee to send the money back then there is no need to do anything further."

Mrs. Marilyn Oman, Maeser neighborhood representative, agreed with Weir. "There is no reason to stay if we may send the money back. This suggestion is not on the same level with the rest," she said.

The money will be reallocated to some other city if Provo doesn't apply for it, said Ron Madsen, CDBG program director.

"The time is now to clarify the committee's position on the funds," Weir said. "I want to see the committee's feeling on this expressed and not just the chairman's."

Objections to the CDBG occupied most of the time during the city commission's public hearing on the grant.

Jensen objected to the grant on the grounds that the CDBG program was formed illegally. "We note that the redevelopment program submitted in 1965 was voted down by a three to one majority," he said. According to Jensen, this was the parent program to the Neighborhood Development Program today.

Madsen said the main difference between the two programs is that the redevelopment agency was independent of the city commission while the new program (CDBG) is under the direct control of the commission.

"I wonder whether the privilege of the people was usurped by action on this bill," Jensen said.

Everyone has genius, church leader says

By D. PATRICK DENNY
Universe Staff Writer

An individual is the greatest in the history of the world, said Sterling W. Sill Tuesday night at ASBYU Leadership Seminar in the ASB Auditorium.

With all the blessings and talents we have within us, we have an obligation to fail in this life," he said.

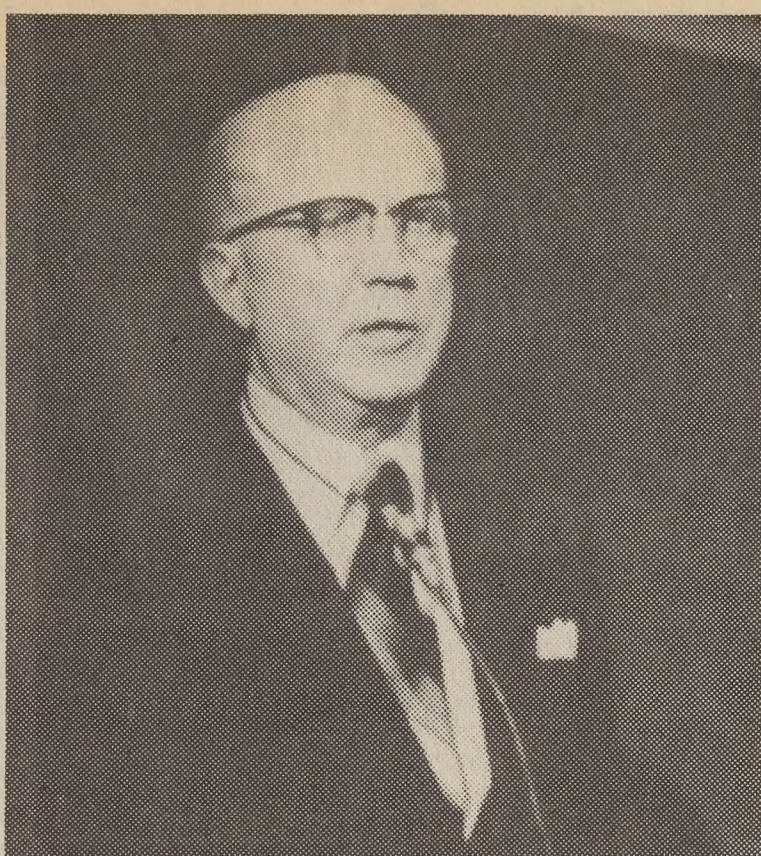

Sill, an emeritus member of the First Quorum of Seventy of the Church who believes that "every man has a little bit of genius in him," said the greatest waste is that of men living below their potential.

One business in life is to succeed, said the prominent speaker and author. He said the problem lies not in a formula for success, but in using it.

Elder Sill outlined his "KASH Formula For Success," saying that a combination of knowledge, attitudes, skills and habits makes for a successful venture in any of life's endeavors.

Without a development of skill, Elder Sill said, knowledge is wasted. "I can study books on and take classes about ice skating for 40 years," he said. "But until I put on those skates and go on the ice and fall down once and twice and 10 times, my knowledge has not been used."

A prominent business man, educator and popular speaker and prolific writer, Elder Sill is a retired insurance executive. Author of several books on religious and social themes, he was for 17 years the speaker on KSL Radio's "Sunday Evening from Temple Square" until 1977.

Elder Sterling W. Sill, emeritus member of the First Quorum of Seventy, outlines his "formula for success" at an ASBYU leadership seminar.

Phi Kappa Phi initiates cautioned to avoid pride

By JOSEPH WALKER
Universe Staff Writer

BYU President Dallin H. Oaks cautioned university scholars Tuesday night to avoid becoming too proud of their accomplishments, and to prepare themselves for leadership in the church and world.

Speaking at the Phi Kappa Phi Initiation Banquet in the ELWC Ballroom, Oaks acknowledged that students being initiated into the honor society did not win their induction "by hasty Saturday studying, but by years of earnest application."

"All of you are blessed with many talents, and we are proud of you," he said, "but you must always keep in mind that where much is given, much is expected."

Oaks pointed out that extensive educational achievement does not assure success, nor is it a prerequisite to greatness. Many, such as Abraham Lincoln, Joseph Smith and Spencer W. Kimball, achieved greatness with comparatively little education, he said.

"This is not to depreciate your achievement, but to help you realize that it has been much easier for you to gain so much more. We have great expectations for each of you," Oaks said.

Oaks shared with the 238 new Phi Kappa Phi scholars his "Theory of Pre-emptive Leadership." "A leaders' potential for negative influence is far greater than his or her potential for positive influence," he said. "If a leader is not successful at anything in his position but not 'messing up,' he is performing a service by at least holding the position so that someone who would 'mess up' can't occupy it."

"Leadership is not a simple craft," Oaks continued. "It is multi-faceted. It is thinking deeply about complicated things. It is stating high ideals, not ambiguously, and then being prepared to see the other side. But perhaps most important, it is not overestimating your own importance as a leader, but preparing yourself for whatever positions of leadership may come."

Announced at the banquet was the winner of the BYU Phi Kappa Phi Graduate Fellowship competition. Stephen Quinn, a senior from Bountiful, Utah, will represent BYU in the national competition for a $3,000 fellowship. Carol Anne Hawkes, a senior from Paris, Idaho, was named alternate in the competition.

Walk in beauty, Elder Lee says

By JORGE TEJEDA
Universe Staff Writer

To walk in beauty means to feel great and at peace about everyone and everything, said George P. Lee, a member of the LDS First Quorum of the Seventy, at the BYU devotional Tuesday in the Marriott Center.

"If we want to be a great soul in heaven, then we ought to live and practice being a great soul here on earth," Elder Lee said.

Putting it in another perspective, Elder Lee said "if we desire exaltation, we ought to walk in beauty all of our days on earth and into the eternities," Elder Lee said to become God-like, we must seek those personality traits and virtues God has. If we do this, he said, our lives will be successful, spiritual and full of beautiful experiences.

"If properly trained and disciplined, our God-like human mind can perform some of the most beautiful and powerful things," he said. "It can make some of you great teachers, great salesmen, great scientists, great musicians or simply great persons."

Success or failure starts in the mind, he said. "Whatever kinds of thoughts we entertain in our minds will dictate whether we will succeed or fail in life."

"One of the biggest problems of our lives comes when we develop a low opinion of ourselves," Elder Lee said. An undisciplined mind will begin to fight against the Church, the government and others.

When we are in an undisciplined and rebellious state of mind, damaging self-criticism and self-condemnation are born, Elder Lee said.

"If we should ever find ourselves under such circumstances, the cure is not to remodel or change the world but to change our self-world first," Elder Lee said. "The change has to come 'within' first. Then as we change inside, the world and people will begin to be a little more beautiful."

It is also important to eliminate impure thoughts from our minds by living a Christ-like life, Elder Lee said. "Jesus Christ never entertained any doubts, fears, hate, evil or negative thoughts in His mind. He invited us to do the same."

"Only when we get the weak and evil thoughts out of our minds, can we begin to 'walk in beauty' and achieve our goal of eternal life with our Heavenly Father."

New oratorio a first for 'Y' student

by MARCI JUDD
Universe Staff Writer

David Zabriskie is making music history at J. He is the first undergraduate music student to compose an oratorio production and see it come to fruition.

Ever since I can remember I've had a desire to produce a major work with a vital message," said the composer of Israel. "It's the culmination of a dream many years."

The inspiration for the production, which will be performed for the first time tonight, came last summer when Zabriskie spent two months in Israel on tour with the BYU A Cappella Choir.

"I was inspired by the land and impressed by the people of Judah. I felt urged to capture the glory and tragedy of the chosen people of God, and to proclaim the promise of their return and salvation."

Zabriskie's work was written in memory of what the Jews have suffered, what they now suffer, and the promises yet to be fulfilled.

The project has turned out to be a bigger undertaking than Zabriskie planned. "I've just about dropped out of school for the past two and a half weeks to get everything done."

Zabriskie, who began playing the piano at the age of seven, says he acquired the nickname "Singin' Sam" before he was even out of the crib, "because — as I'm told — I would sing myself to sleep every night."

In high school, Zabriskie considered going into science or electronics before music entered the picture. "I loved music, but didn't have the background for it," he said.

It wasn't until after his mission that Zabriskie was able to really concentrate on composition, which he calls his first love. Since starting to work on Israel last October, he says everything seems to be falling into place for him.

Regardless of all the time and expense he's gone to already, Zabriskie calls Israel a worthwhile effort. "It's been worth every minute I've spent and every headache," he said.

"It's more than I ever envisioned it to be. Some parts of it come across so powerful and penetrating that I've astounded even myself."

Israel has given Zabriskie a strong commitment to what he has known for a long time he wants to do.

"I had to decide if "Ever since I can remember, I've had a desire to produce a major work with a vital message," says David Zabriskie. Zabriskie's oratorio, Israel, will premier tonight.

music composition was what I wanted to be in. I told myself if this came off successfully I would stay in music composition. Now, I feel like I could accomplish anything in music, as long as I dedicate myself to it."

Music will continue to be an increasingly important part of Zabriskie's life as it has been in the past, but he is concerned that it doesn't become his whole life.

"I want to always maintain plenty of other interests, such as sports and the arts. Once you lose outside interests you also lose a lot of your talent," he said.

Zabriskie is almost to the point now where he can sit back and listen to his work when it is performed, and it's something he's really looking forward to.

Israel, which includes an oratorio choir with 50 voices, a children's choir and a 40-piece orchestra, will be conducted by Dr. Ronald S. Staheli, who also conducts the BYU oratorio choir.

The performance will be tonight in the Provo tabernacle at no charge to the public.

Band and trio to perform

The BYU Band, Brass Trio, and Trombone Quartet will present a combined concert Wednesday, Feb. 14.

The 8 p.m. concert, sponsored by the department of music, will be in the deJong Concert Hall of the Harris Fine Arts Center.

Tickets are available at the Music Ticket Office, HFAC.

You, too can tune in TV20

TV 20's 1,000,000 watt (ERP) signal can be picked up anywhere along the Wasatch Front. So for the few who haven't tried it, here's how to do it.

1. A UHF antenna. If you are using an indoor antenna for the VHF stations (Channels 2, 4, 5, 7 & 11) then, a small indoor UHF antenna should suffice. There are 2 types, bow and loop. Indoor antennas are very inexpensive. Simply hook the antenna up to the UHF terminal on your TV set.

2. Fine tuning. After turning your UHF channel dial to 20, try adjusting the UHF fine tuner to sharpen the signal just as you would with your radio dial in fine tuning a radio station. These 2 simple processes will assure you a clear UHF picture. Then, you'll clearly see that TV 20 is Utah's new great entertainer!

Utah's economics
Redd lecture subject

Railroads, religion and economic development in Utah will be the topic at the Charles Redd Lecture today at 8 p.m. in A104 JKBA.

The lecture, which has been prepared by L. Dwight Israelsen and Dick K. Nanto, both assistant professors of economics at BYU, will be presented by Israelsen.

The lecture will provide evidence on the nature of the dual economy of Utah, trace the economic impact of the interaction of assimilative forces such as the railroad, and deal with resistant forces such as the self-sufficiency and cooperative programs of LDS Church.

The lecture will also deal with the interaction of these forces which led to the eventual incorporation of Utah into the modern national economy.

'Understand concepts,' testing official suggests

By JOHN JESSE
Universe Staff Writer

The owner of the world's largest test
preparation center,
Stanley H. Kaplan, visited BYU Tuesday to meet with officials of the pre-medical and pre-dental associations and explain the purpose of the test preparation centers he owns.

"We don't just prepare students to take tests and to learn the answers," Kaplan said.
"We help them understand the concepts involved by going over each concept very thoroughly. Of course we can't push someone

beyond what they can do.

"America's educational system is much, much better than anyone else's," Kaplan said.

But America's system is not without problems, and television creates one of the biggest problems, he said.

"It's an idiot box, all people do is watch it all day," Kaplan said.
"Parents are at fault too because they use it to quiet their children, instead of having interaction with them."

Interaction with children while they are still young is the key to improving education for the disadvantaged,
Kaplan said.

"There is an old saying, 'give me a child from 1 to 6 and I will have him for a lifetime.'
This applies to education," he said.

A love for teaching since his youth sent Kaplan into education.
"Other kids used to play
doctor. I would play
teacher," Kaplan said.
"I would have to pay my friends to sit down so I could teach them."

The New York resident graduated from college with a teaching degree and has been teaching ever since. His world-wide test preparation centers offer courses to prepare students for college and graduate entrance examinations.

OPINION—COMMENT

Unsigned editorials represent the position of the editorial board of the Daily Universe.

BYU's fairness fight: a thorn in HEW's side

When a regulatory agency, such as the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, begins throwing too much weight around, who is to stand up to it?

It seems BYU has taken on that assignment once again; and rightfully so. Being the largest private university in the country, BYU can be a thorn in HEW's side that will not go unnoticed.

The issue this time has to do with the power of HEW to regulate athletics, as proposed in a policy interpretation applying to Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972. In a statement sent to the Office for Civil Rights of HEW, BYU president Dallin H. Oaks challenged this most recent attempt by HEW to go beyond its regulatory powers.

BYU is known for the importance it places on athletic programs for both men and women. HEW must recognize that something is wrong with its proposed policy when avid supporters of women's athletics, such as BYU, object to the measures. Although BYU doesn't represent all schools, Pres. Oaks is not alone in his challenge. He is supported by numerous other educational institutions which have filed specific comments on this problem.

It is becoming apparent that HEW sees itself as the only group wise enough to determine how women should be treated at educational institutions. This in and of itself constitutes a prejudice. Such arrogance must not be present in an agency designed to eliminate prejudice in colleges and universities.

As pointed out by Oaks, if HEW is serious about the proposed regulatory policies, it must not doubt feel that compulsion is more important than education. Hopefully, this is not representative of HEW's real intentions.

Academic freedom, as guaranteed by the Constitution, reserves to individuals and institutions the power to make decisions HEW presumes without right for itself in the proposed policy.

BYU and other universities should strengthen their challenge to keep HEW within the boundaries set down in 1972. HEW must remain a problem-solving regulatory agency, not a problem-causing one.

Farm lobbyists unskilled; proposals offer no solution

Midwestern farmers reved up their John Deeres and Massey Fergusons last week and cruised Pennsylvania Avenue in demand of higher farm price supports. But the tractorcade was only a destructive way of asking for undesirable federal regulation.

The American Agriculture Movement, an organization which represents a small number of the nation's farmers, made its complaints public by tying up Washington D.C. rush-hour traffic. But congressional opposition was unimpressed and farm movement supporters frustrated. Congressman Thaddeus Bickers, a capital hill backer of the farm demands, had scheduled a press conference to declare his unqualified support, but the tractor-caused traffic jam caused him to miss it. Now he says he will not seek re-election rather than represent the "money grubbing boll weevils."

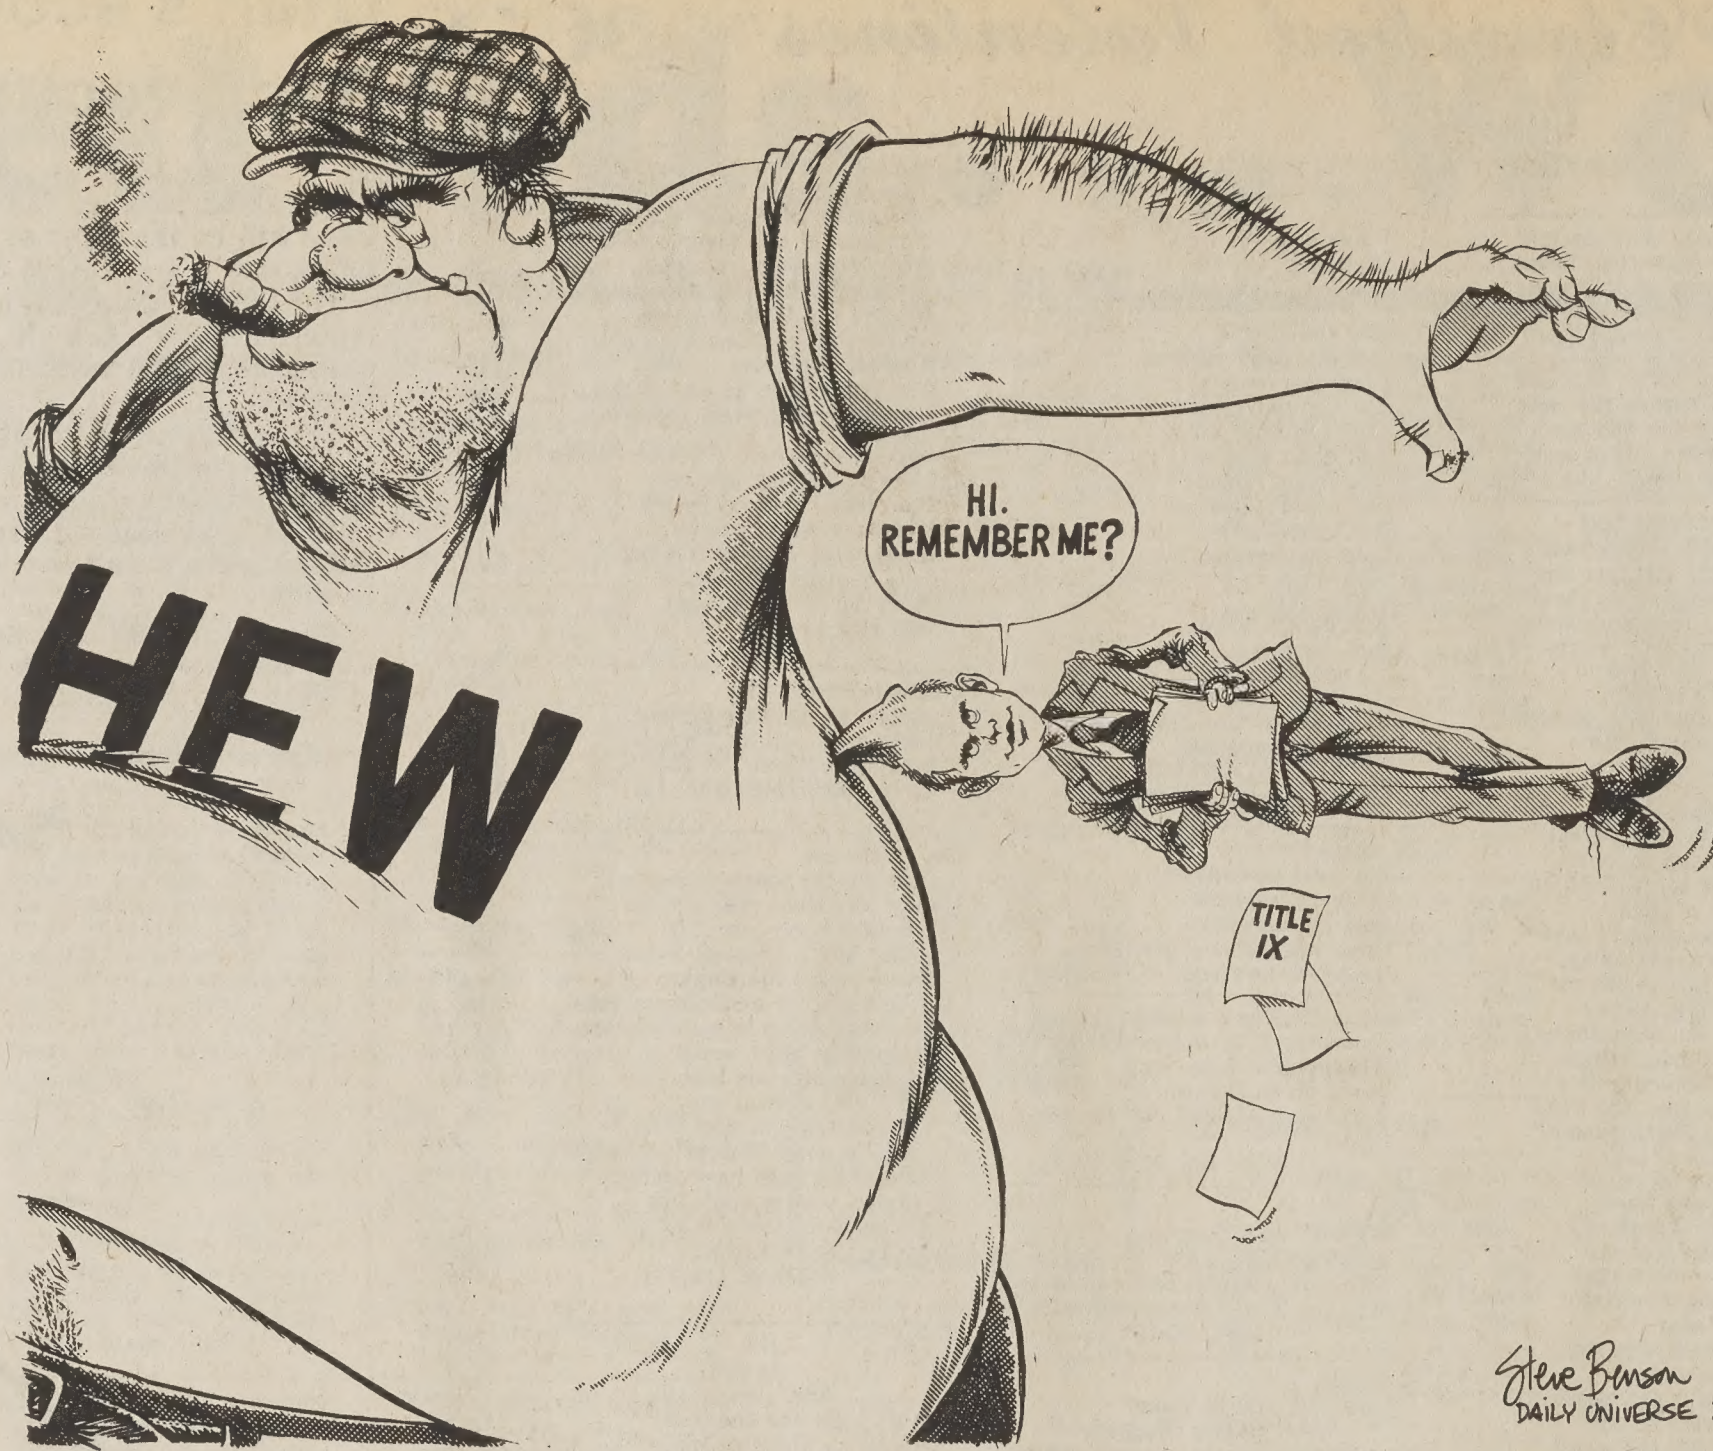

During the week of tractor demonstrations, farmers broke the water tight seal in the Washington Monument reflecting pool, destroyed the turf of the Capital Mall, and vandalized subway and bus stops. All totaled, the damage will run more than $1 million.

We should sympathize with the economic plight of the nation's grain farmers but agree with Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland's belief that the farmers' proposals would do more harm than good. Higher price supports would only force the United States out of the world grain market — the only possible way of taking care of this country's giant grain surplus which depresses prices.

Federal price supports should only be a temporary solution to emergencies, not a permanent measure as the American Agriculture Movement suggests. One solution is to find new markets, such as mainland China, for U.S. farm products. Farmers should encourage Bergland to step up his efforts to increase demand for U.S. farm products rather than artificially raise the price of wheat by $2.02 a bushel.

Even if leaders of the American Agriculture Movement cannot be persuaded to change their demands, they certainly need a good lesson in lobbying.

Valentine's Day: a pair of reactions

I didn't want to wake up this morning.

I knew if it was a typical Valentine's Day, it would begin with anticipation, drag on in suspense and end in embarrassment.

The worst part of the holiday is not ending the day flowerless, candleless and cardless; it isn't even throwing away the Valentines I so enthusiastically wrote the night before but lost the nerve to send. The worst part of the day for me is answering inquisitive parents, roommates, friends, co-workers and classmates when they ask how many Valentines I got.

To spare myself another bout with humiliation, I have devised a plan this year to keep people guessing. This list should prove useful to the countless others in my same situation.

To parents who live in the area — Remind them of the dinner date you had with Bob two weeks ago. (Do not remind them it was Preference and you invited him.) Tell them it was an early Valentine's Day date.

To parents who live out of town — Lie and say you received a long-stemmed red rose, sent anonymously. Say it could have been sent by any one of a dozen guys.

To roommates — It is hard to hide anything from the people you live with. The best tactic is to burst into tears and run to your room when they ask if you got any Valentines.

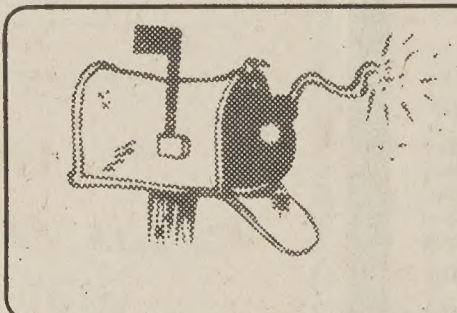

To people in the ward — Hide in an isolated corner of the library all evening. Take a bag of potato chips. Tell all inquirers you had dinner in a secluded spot and be evasive about who you were with. They will think it is someone they know and may even start exciting rumors about you.

To co-workers — Make an effort to be cheerful all day. Ask to leave 10 minutes early and they'll be certain you have to meet someone for the special occasion.

To classmates — Take a Valentine with you to class and read it during the lecture, being sure to conceal the signature. When asked about it, insist it was sent by "just a friend." They won't believe you.

At the end of the day, cry yourself to sleep in the privacy of your own room. Console yourself with the idea that it will be a full year before it is Valentine's Day again. By that time you will probably have different roommates, co-workers, classmates and people in your ward, making this year's excuses re-usable.

Letters to the Editor

An instructor in arrogance

Editor:

I am writing in reference to one of the "sacred cows" on campus.

I work in the SFH issue room. Faculty members are frequently in and out to collect equipment or needed clothing. Most are polite and adhere to Issue Room policies. But one P.E. instructor has placed himself above all of this. He comes inside the Issue Room anytime he desires (against policy) and collects as much and anything he so desires, and leaves.

Tuesday, he had come in again, unnoticed to either of us who were then on duty. While he was on his "shopping spree," I tossed a basketball towards his container, but missed, and it went behind a rack of equipment where he was apparently standing. I went to retrieve the ball and was surprised by not only my arrogant visitor, but a face full of basketball, as well. He had thrown it in my face.

"Sorry, thought your hands were up," was all he said, with as much sincerity as Charles Manson.

Had he not been there, had he obeyed rules, had he been polite like his faculty peers, the ball wouldn't have hit him and he wouldn't have to apologize for hitting me in the face.

Until this instructor and others like him can learn to obey simple rules, students will continue to be frustrated by long lines, problems and mixups caused by such rude and impersonal arrogance as demonstrated by this issue-room trespasser.

Glade? Meet Kathy...

Editor:

I would like to address the following letter to Glade Ross.

Dear Glade,

I can sympathize with the unhappiness you experienced as a result of not being asked to Preference. As a matter of fact, during the past two years that I've been here at the Y, I've been wondering why a sweet, considerate, attractive, fun-loving young lady such as myself has averaged about two dates a semester. Like you, I have invested a great amount of time and effort into making myself the kind of person that a member of the opposite sex would like to take out. However, all my efforts seem to have been in vain, and I too, have been left with nothing but the "awful heartbreak of wondering why."

If you're really the kind of guy you described yourself as — well, Glade, all I can say is, where have you been all my life?

Scene of the crime

Editor:

I wish to express thanks to BYU's crack team of Security Officers for their genuine efforts to defend the student body and help each of us become more familiar with the laws of the land. Specifically, I desire to thank the officer who so courteously stopped his car in the middle of campus drive to inform me that I had violated Utah law by entering the crosswalk at a trot. I also thank the east and west bound drivers who passed me, while I was standing between the east and west bound lanes, for not smashing me into chuck hole filler while I was enjoying this enlightening conversation with the Officer.

BYU Security, what would I do without you? Now if we could only arrange to have an officer meet me there each night after school and take me by the hand...

Driver vs. pedestrian

Editor:

While Mr. Phipps and Mr. Ebert are correct in stating that the pedestrians have the right-of-way, they were incorrect in assuming that Mrs. Lewis and the other driver were at fault. It is AGAINST THE LAW for a pedestrian to step in front of an oncoming car without giving that car and any following cars ample time to stop. Mr. Phipps and Mr. Ebert assumed that Mrs. Lewis was speeding. That may be false. Were they witnesses? If the pedestrian did not step directly in front of Mrs. Lewis' car, as Mrs. Lewis stated in her letter, the pedestrian CAUSED AN ACCIDENT and could receive a citation. Regardless, however, she was a witness to the accident and should have remained on the scene to give an account to the police.

Not all pedestrians are innocent, and not all drivers are out to get them. Both pedestrians and drivers need to be courteous and obey all the laws to avoid accidents.

Bluegrass music blues

Editor:

I would like to add a new species to the endangered list: bluegrass music.

Recently, I was greatly excited by announcements for a take ten concert featuring "The Bluegrass Remedy," a local bluegrass band, but after I skipped part of one of my classes to be there at 10 a.m., I found it had been cancelled. This bothered me but I wasn't beaten yet. I received information that this same group performs every Friday night at a local ice cream shop, so off I went to hear bluegrass as it should be played, and I must admit, the band wasn't a disappointment. Unfortunately, the audience was. My date and I had to risk embarrassment just to applaud. I have never heard such rude comments as those of the local disco-goers. Some of their rudeness was even loud enough to be overheard by the band members.

All these things are a disappointment to me, but the last straw came in an article in the Feb. 12 issue of the Daily Universe, which stated that several "country" radio stations were banning bluegrass because, "there simply isn't enough demand for the music" and calls bluegrass a "forgotten stepchild."

I say bluegrass is not a stepchild, and it is not forgotten. Bluegrass is the

Metric move advances by centimeters

Even though the sign on the local bank flashes the temperature in both Fahrenheit and Celsius, and Shasta sells soft drinks in liter bottles, Americans have a long way to go before they catch up with the metric countries — they are kilometers ahead of us.

Despite the Metric Conversion Act signed by President Gerald R. Ford in 1975, the U.S. is inching its way along. Although not law, the act aimed at total conversion in the U.S. by 1980 — the next year.

Why should the U.S. go to all the trouble and expense to change to a different system? For one thing, the metric system is easier to learn. The units all bear a decimal relationship, making computations possible without paper and pencil.

Since the metric system is recognized in worldwide trade standards, continued use of the English system is a barrier to economic trade.

The high cost estimates for the U.S. to change to metric seem to be based on the assumption that conversion will be total and will involve the immediate replacement of very expensive machinery and measuring devices. One expert says neither of these assumptions is valid. He maintains conversion will take place over an extended period during which much machinery can be replaced as it wears out or becomes obsolete.

Another argument against conversion is the fact that the decimeter is too long to take the place of an inch, and the centimeter is too short. This is true so long as one thinks in terms of inches, feet and yards. If one thinks in terms of metric divisions, 30 centimeters is just as handy as one foot, and 25 millimeters is just as handy as one inch. These are the nearest round number equivalents to American measures.

If we were to change to the metric system, it would make little difference in everyday measurements after one has learned the units.

"Science Digest" reports children who learn both systems even prefer the metric. It just can't be that difficult to learn — unless one is close-minded and unwilling to change. In fact, all researchers have found the public does not oppose to the metric system, but to change in general. And many studies show that people who are opposed, even briefly to the metric system find their fears relieved.

No, the metric system is not coming to America, it is here. Idaho potato mileage signs in both miles and kilometers. We buy 35 millimeter film and watch the Olympic swimming and running competitions measured in meters. Metrics is being taught in grade schools. My eight-year-old sister uses pieces of straw cut into decimeter and centimeter lengths to measure things. She only knows her height in meters.

While full conversion may take years, now is the time to continue becoming acquainted with the all unfamiliar meters, liters and kilometers.

ancestor of modern "country" music is not stepchild, and there is a greater demand for it than most people realize. This should be obvious by the widespread use of bluegrass in advertising and movies. Most people who say they hate bluegrass enjoy such songs as "Dueling Banjos" or "Foggy Mountain Scrags." "Foggy Mountain Breakdown." In addition to this, banjo is the only American-created musical instrument.

Yes, I'm one of those banjo-picking, guitar-strumming, fiddle-sawing bluegrass fanatics, and I think it is awful shame to accelerate the destruction of such an endangered species.

Oppressed coeds

Editor:

I have recently been made aware of the distressing lack of any feminist organization at BYU.

I find it particularly tragic that this widely accepted and practiced evil of oppressing and manipulating women is not being actively opposed at this university (in fact, it is promoted), that further, the virtues and advantages of women being free, to men, women and society, is not taught. I've never seen Joy Ross' article of 1966 was indeed a light in the dark. Thank you!

The feminism that frees women from a male directed and defined society, the only true way to ennoblement, women and for justice in society, should be taught by all those seeking truth.
